KET College Courses begin summer schedule June 12

Registration is in progress at many participating Kentucky colleges and universities for 2006's summer session of KET College Courses. The courses begin airing Monday, June 12 and will be available through video-streaming in addition to regular broadcast delivery and VHS/DVD rental.

KET's college credit courses allow students to study at home, even though distance and time might separate them from higher education institutions. Course assignments can be completed at each student's pace since the televised programs are available for recording, renting or online viewing. Campus instructors facilitate these fully accredited college courses, which may require a few on-campus sessions, and students can communicate with their instructors through e-mail, phone or fax. Upon successful completion of each course, students earn three hours of college credit.

The following colleges and universities are offering credit for some or all of KET College Courses this summer: Big Sandy Community and Technical College, Eastern Kentucky University, Elizabethtown Community and Technical College, Jefferson Community College, Kentucky State University, Morehead State University, Murray State University, Northern Kentucky University, Owensboro Community and Technical College, Somerset Community College, Southeast Kentucky Community and Technical College, University of Kentucky, University of Louisville and West Kentucky Community and Technical College.

The lineup for the 2006 summer semester includes six undergraduate-level college courses:

Discovering Psychology—principles of psychology

Dollars and Sense—personal finance

Exploring Society—sociology

Framework for Democracy—American government

Journey to Health—personal health

Literary Visions—literature and literary analysis
